important work on the main street.

It is the high cost of loading rather than the high cost of living that troubles America today, in the opin on expressed in a recent issue of the Corn Exchange, the monthly magazine of the Corn Exchange National Board of Philadelphia. The paper says that the country is producing less per hour, per man, than before the war although the rate of consumption is greater. This being true, prices continue to advance and further advances may be expected until an economic balance is effected between production and consumption. The solution of the probelm as indisated by President Wilson, Governor Harding, of the Federal Reserve Board, and others, is to increase production and reduce expenditures. Investigation by a large manufacturing plant of Philadelphia, says Jorn Exchange, recently showed that under identical circumstances the production per man per hour was onehalf more before the war githough wages have been doubled.
